

I use to be a AT&T customer, and then had to switch over to T-mobile due to their ridiculous prices per packages(internet & txt), roaming charges, and lack of loyal customer relation. T-mobile has been considerate of my needs, and has great affordable prices per package and phones. It seems that AT&T is just out to make a quick buck for everything they can. I dont think that AT&T should be allowed to buy out T-mobile. They would just monopolize the cellphone industry with their outrageousness prices and fee's.
