

As a T-mobile user I hope AT&T is not going to buy T-mobile. I had their phone, TV, and internet services when I moved I called them and let them know that I am moving. On the day that the services where supposed to be connected no one came. On the phone I was told that I was not have any appointment due and that I am not even in their system even though I gave them the number that they themselves gave me when I placed connection request. A couple of days later I a guy shows up to connect the service. I told him no thanks we already got service from Cox. This is very unprofessional on their part. There is no way I want to be doing any more business with such unprofessional company like them.
