

I think this is a great opportunity! Now, as a consumer, I won't have to slog through the interwebs and try to decide what the best phone and plan for me would be, since I will only have one choice. And I won't have to worry about how much of my pay I will have to spend on staying in touch with my loved ones since I will either pay what they want or be forced to resurrect the lost art of carrier pigeons. Which will come in handy once the ambition to develop new technology has been bludgeoned to death with the dull blade of market stagnation since there will be no one left to compete with and our society is forced back into an analogue nightmare; I will be the sole person with the knowledge to send a pigeon to your sick mother. I am going to make a fortune!