

If the proposed legislation does not require phone companies to remove third party charges, but only allows for easier identification of them, what good is it?

If these charges are added for no service provided it seems to me that itself is illegal and a severe penalty should be levied for each customer they charge.