

From my experience working in the cellular industry, I strongly believe it to be in everyone's best interest to allow legacy boosters to be grandfathered under any new standards as long as they continue to function properly. I also believe it to be extremely important and, again, in everyone's best interest, that any booster registration requirements should not place a burden on consumers and must protect their information. These conclusions have come after working with many different individuals, businesses, and organizations with their cellular communications (including emergency services, public safety, hospitals, state government, small and large businesses, school districts and universities, etc.).

Thank you in advance for taking these recommendations into consideration.
