

I am a High School teacher. The impact cellular devices have had on school culture and classroom climate has been immense. Why are we allowing the phone companies to invade public education? As a taxpayer it horrifies me. Teachers are blamed for poor performance while phone company profits soar. When will teachers and administrators take their schools back? These devices have had disastrous effects on an already strained educational system and it should be against the law as it is robbing tax payers of their education dollars! Virginia Whitehead
