

I am pleased the black out rule is being reviewed. I had been a season ticket holder for many years, but now have a couple of young children that deter me from attending the Bills games. If the game does not sell out, the result is a black out. By not being able to attend the game, or watch the game due to black out, I am just driven further away from associating with the Bills. Eventually, my kids will be old enough and I will take them to a game. It would be nice if they knew about the team from watching them, or picked up on my interest in the Bills. Please modify the ruling in favor of the taxpayers in the State, who have already paid taxes to support the team, in addition to paying their cable/satellite bill.