

It is time to get rid of the FCC's blackout rule.

The rule is only there to help further enrich owners who are already incredibly wealthy.

Meanwhile, the rules prevent taxpayers who paid for the construction of many of the stadiums where the games are played from watching the games. It also disallows fans that cannot afford the high costs of tickets from seeing their team play. This only helps to keep a casual fan base from forming and keeps loyal fans from watching their favorite teams.

This outdated law needs to be removed.
