

I am an amateur radio operator and oppose the LightSquared proposal to interfere with the GPS system. The GPS frequency band is reserved for low power satellite positioning technology and should not receive interference from land based internet 4G technology.

GPS is a national treasure used by consumers, industry, aviation and the military that enhances safety and convenience. It should not be compromised by a company for their own financial gain. Let them find other ways to provide advanced 4G internet technology.