

I am writing on behalf of the performance of Nicki Minaj at the 2012 Grammy's. I was so saddened to see that a network would choose to air it's content. I had been watching the event with my family and could not imagine had he still be awake to witness it's performance.

If the Grammy's wish to continue to display acts that portray any religion or culture in such a disgusting way, please make us viewers properly warned so I can make better choices to not watch with my family. It's one thing to have an artist act out when given the limelight from winning an award, but definitely another to knowing air something that went from a tasteful show to one that I would have been outraged had my son seen had he still been awake.

With the talk of their being a fine against the artist who showed her middle finger during the super bowl, I think a fine is just as in ordered against those who approved such a horrid performance... the Grammy's, the network and Nicki Minaj.

Thank you,
