

The blackout rule should be eliminated. As taxpayer's we payed for our stadium so the Chargers could hold more spectators than the average stadium and host a Super Bowl. The price of attending a game is far beyond the means of many who paid taxes to build and expand the stadium. There are also many citizens that simply cannot attend games at the stadium for physical or other reasons. The NFL received a direct benefit from all tax payers in San Diego and need to be held to their promise to provide football entertainment to San Diegans, all San Diegans, not just those that can afford to attend a game.
