

Ticket prices are out of reach of most of the fans of NFL, in San Diego and or any proposed expansion site. Tax incentives are given, fan support drives the economy, and sports should not become an elitist experience based on regulations passed 50 years ago. Pricing and blackouts constitute extortion by the owners. With the salaries and profits, there should never be a game that is not sold out...if nothing else the NFL should buy the tickets and donate to the military or some other deserving charity.