

This rule has outlived its usefulness and is unfair to a number of groups of people:

1. Sports fans that cannot afford to go to games of the host city.
2. People that live within the "Media Area" of a team, I live 2 hours and thirty minutes from San Diego and am still "in their market".
3. Satellite users that paid for the privilege to "watch every game on Fox and CBS on Sundays."
4. Fans that would go to games if the product was better. Having a sport that is this wealthy and has 25% of the teams that are not watchable is a joke and should not be protected by the government in the form of a subsidy to help sell tickets.
