

In San Diego two football teams share Qualcomm Stadium, a publicly financed stadium, a NFL team and Division 1-A NCAA team. I am a former season ticket holder for both teams but due to the economic down turn and poor play by both teams I have relinquished my season tickets. Prior to the economic down turn, I purchased a 46" HDTV and have found that football has become a TV game. I feel that TV networks and their advertisers should be able to sell to me each and every game as they are paying for it. As a local taxpayer, I feel that NFL should not be able to blackout local games in publicly financed stadiums.
