

As an engineering consulting firm, we use handheld GPS technology to support a wide variety of projects for a wide variety of clients from environmental permitting to municipal inventory to archeological surveys. The potential threat from LightSquared would cripple our productivity on these types of projects.