

The news blurb that I have read is that the FCC is asking for more public input. Why ?

"...the National Telecommunications and Information Administration (NTIA) concluded that LightSquared's wireless broadband signals interfere with millions of GPS devices in use today - including for aviation navigation-..."

It says "concluded" and "interfere". So why is the FCC taking more input, are you going to change physics ? Move on !!