

While the goal of a nationwide broadband wireless system is admirable, the demonstration that the system will interfere with GPS devices makes the system clearly unwarranted. Perhaps other bandwidth can be set aside for this purpose, but the value and utility of GPS is established beyond question and must be protected against interference.

William M. Coltharp P. E.

Board Certified Forensic Engineer