

As an avid and active boater in Long Island Sound, I believe GPS accuracy will suffer, and it would be a very dear price to pay for just another communications channel.

Another frequency band should be found for communications, that does not affect the weak satellite signals of the GPS system.

We depend on the FCC to preserve our safety on the water, where GPS has come to be the main form of electronic aid to navigation.

Please stop or change the current LightSquared proposal.