

I strongly object to approving any permits that interfere with GPS or other existing signals and bandwidths. I can appreciate that competition can be beneficial, but there are substantial wireless networks in place that already provide that.

GPS is an extremely valuable service in it's own right, critical to air and boating traffic, especially in emergency or poor visibility situations, and should not be endangered or comprimised in any way.