

I sail mostly on the Chesapeake Bay but also in other areas on the East Coast. GPS is vital to the safe operation of any vessel and as a skipper with almost 50 years of experience, I strongly urge that any proposal jeopardizing the reliability of GPS be denied.

GPS is the primary navigation system used by most recreational sailors and the loss of this would be a major setback to the safety of recreational (as well as commercial) boating.