

I humbly request that the FCC finalize approval of this enhanced disclosure rule soon before all the Republican Presidential primaries are over (hopefully before Super Tuesday) and to start requiring broadcasters make their political files available online well in advance of the general election season. Broadcasters have wanted the FCC to delay its decision on whether to implement said rules hoping whether they do or not it will be too late to take effect this election season. Do not delay any further and doesn't grant anymore delay requests. Progressives United.org a group I support is working to overturn the Supreme Court's egregious Citizens United ruling and believes in full transparency and the right of Congress to limit spending from outside groups in funding political advertising. FreePress.Net the media reform group which also runs the SaveTheInternet.com Coalition is a firm supporter of this proposed new rule and as such I believe strongly that while Citizens United should be overturned (and it can be done by Congress and the states ratifying an amendment to the U.S. Constitution doing so) until it is we need some disclosure of who's trying to influence our votes and our elections.
