

To FCC Commissioners Genachowski, Clyburn and McDowell:

The issue at hand is very simple. Monopolies are not good for competition, not good for innovation and certainly not good for consumers. At many earlier points in American history the public and government has strongly fought against monopolies because they understood this. The tendency of corporate entities to grow to sizes that are contrary to the public good must be checked. As the nature of corporate behavior has not changed over the years I urge you to support the public good and continue to check media monopolies.
