

I support the ability for law enforcement to suspend , jam, block, or any other means disrupt the cell service signals to reduce the interference in the performance of their duties. Cell phone detonation of explosives is an obvious threat made notorious by Al-Qaeda proliferated by the internet. Flash mobs and the concept of everyone participating in news gathering by cell phone camera are other definite detractors at a law enforcement scene. First responders would be far more beneficial to those in need if they were not hampered by the public's desire to "make the news".
