

As someone who relies on GPS navigation systems in my recreational boating and the driving essential to my professional life, I urge the rejection of LightSquared's proposals, including the latest. Your own conclusion that their electromagnetic signals, at whatever frequency, will interfere with GPS reception should put an end to this unfortunate project.