

At this point in time land lines can be reverse searched for free to determine who has phoned. All cellphone mobile lines can only be reverse searched if the consumer is willing to pay a fee. This not reasonable; it is inconsistent and penalizes the US population in a time when we are moving more and more to mobile communications. When you find a number has called you, it is valuable to know who that number belongs to. Regardless of whether you know the person or company or not, it is important for US consumers to be able to identify a phone call. I don't know if this is the best proceeding under which to make this comment, but the matter is important. Thank you for your consideration.
