

Dear FCC, while I realize under extreme and rare circumstances, blocking signals may have a value, (i.e. scenarios where citizens safety is concerned), this idea is fundamentally wrong. We, the people, have a right to speak. Blocking cell phone transmissions is a direct violation of that right. Even if the powers that be feel they are doing this for the good of others. During these blocked transmissions any number of events can unfold, some benign, some emergencies, some daily responsibilities the list can go on. I can not predict all of the scenarios just as 'they' can not predict the event(s) they are blocking may unfold and occur or not. Please follow the Constitution of this great country and stand for us citizens. Thank you.
