

A recent purchase of a book on the Comp TIA exam was accompanied by some excitement (SP?) when trying to make a call to the police from a pay phone at the Circle K at San Pedro and Central recently after purchasing the book. I had walked over to a "Taco Van" on the street immediately west of San Pedro on the North side of Central to inquire about the price of taco's. A few SUVs with driven by young people with military licence tags pulled up and the young men stood behind me in line. I moved to the north side of the parking lot with my bag that had the Comp TIA convergence test book in it. When I walked over to the pay phone at the Circle K (on the south east corner of Central and San Pedro and made a call to APD I looked down to find my book and it was not there. I returned to the parking lot with the Taco Loco truck and the bag was approximately where I had set it down after the "young military men" walked up close behind me. East bound APD police cars were driven rapidly and the Taco Loco truck accelerated (Apparently with an almost uniform acceleration (rapidly) to the North (with California licence tags)) before attaining a constant velocity as I was left with a book of not unquestionable validity (Upon reading part of the book the next morning it said that all programs have bugs). The book that starts by discussing various networking models and then later discusses telephony concepts and is supposed to cover the interface between analog telephone systems and digital Wi-Fi may not be any more useful for understanding how telephones work than the telephone that I had of the Houston In-town suites gave me and said "it is yours" after reporting missing Whataburger receipts that I had used for various derivations of wave equations from Maxwells equations were pick pocketed and then returned about the time of making payments to the IRS. Coincidentally a young woman that looked like Selena Gomez was seen driving through the drive through in a red car shortly after I had used the receipts for the derivations. The work on the receipts was done at the nearby Tucson coffee shop. Mentioning that I was working Heat transfer problems to a local deputy on the receipts may have not been a great idea as gangs of pick pocketers have been forming in New Mexico especially in areas heavily travelled by the bus system. The almost everyday burglary of my room, storage space or pockets may not be as much of an effort to discredit my ability to keep financial records as it is to ""embezzel"" a "would be" technical advance. The idea that someones cell phone air time can be slammed along with all of his account balances dropping to near zero leading to a jail stay in an isolation cell while he attempts a Nobel Prize in relativity with a piece of pencil led no longer than his fingernail does not have local law enforcement officials in the Albuquerque area amused. While I am on the topic of slamming of cell phone air time perhaps I could receive some information on the design of standard land line phones (similar to the one that Ida gave me).

Thank You,
