

Cyber security measures by government and corporations can help thwart attacks to our national security whether its by hackers using malware like Trojan horses, ad-ware, spy-ware or other forms of viruses to infect a computer system or network to take over it or cyber criminals using information provided by gullible citizens responding to junk (“SPAM”) email to steal their identity and ruin their credit must be implemented. However, reasonable efforts to protect the legitimate privacy of Americans in regard to government and corporate intelligence sharing efforts must be made to protect civil liberties of most Americans.
