

I was under assumption that a law had been passed that advertisements on tv could not be blasted in volume. The Xfinity ad of Comcast has been doing this and in as much as I live in a townhouse, I must run to tv to turn it down and then wait to turn the sound back up. As a senior citizen this is an aggravation that I would like to see end as soon as possible, as well as other ads doing the same often on the late shows at night. I guess that is to keep us awake to hear them.
