

What bothers me most about the Verizon/cable deal is that customers are looked on as dollars that can breathe. We exist solely to provide their profit and nothing else is of any consequence whatsoever. This is already the standard and if this deal goes through it will only help to make monopolies easier to form and remove what little choice we have left about where to spend what little money we have. I realize that we are capitalists, but as a US citizen I object to the government sanctioning such naked corporate-person greed at the expense of actual living, breathing persons.
