

I already don't have a "choice" of cable providers in this market.

Aren't the big media conglomerates big enough already? Don't they already shirk the FCC's authority by refusing to compete with each other?

America already lags behind the rest of the world when it comes to internet and cable technologies and with no competition, where's the incentive to keep up with improvements?

A deal like this spits in the face of the American Entrepreneurial spirit. I want more choices, better products, and greater freedom from corporate tyranny, not less, like this deal would entail.
