

This is just one of many reasons that anti-trust laws should actually be enforced.

A couple of decades ago corporations whined to Congress that they can't be "globally competitive" unless they were allowed to gobble up domestic competitors and create de facto monopolies. After plenty of $ exchanged hands, they got what they wanted, and now we have companies that squash innovation, collude on pricing, and are "too big to fail".

True capitalism is a pretty good system. Too bad the big boys are afraid of it.
