

I would like to express my concerns on allowing Verizon and the different cable companies to partner up on providing telcom/television service. I believe it would be the biggest mistake in telcom since D.O.J. broke up At&T. How many jobs will be lost? Where is the incentive for these companies to invest in new technology? Why upgrade facilities? I believe America will fall even further behind the world in telcom technology. Think of the jobs lost in America. Will Verizon retain their install/repair crews? Will cable retain their install repair crews? What about the call centers? Will we call one number (IN INDIA) for cable or phone? I am pleading with you to take a long hard look before final approval.
