

Many believe that AT&T and Verizon are becoming a national duopoly. Concerns were voiced to the FCC by competitors, stating that AT&T's proposal will weaken competition and increase the slope on the uphill battle. AT&T's purchases, along with Verizon Communications success acquiring cable spectrum, will prevent small and rural carriers from having access to airwaves.