

I live in a rural area and have access to no wired services. I have to depend on Satellite service for TV and internet services. Before the transition of HDTV I could use an outside antenna for the Huntsville, AL TV stations and depended on it for local weather and conditions that I need because I work in Huntsville and they provided detailed weather conditions for my area. But with the nature of HDTV signals, you get a signal or you do not. I do not. I requested the Huntsville Stations for my locals through Dish Network but was told because of my zip code I had to get the Nashville stations because I was in the Nashville Market area. Huntsville is 30 and Nashville is 90 miles from my home. Not having a local source for tornado warnings, road conditions in bad weather puts us at an extreme disadvantage and consider it a safety issue.
