Re: Revision of the Commission's Program Access Rules, MB Docket No. 12-68; News Corporation, The DIRECTV Group, Inc., and Liberty Media Corporation, MB Docket No. 07-18; Adelphia Communications Corporation, Time Warner Cable Inc., and Comcast Corporation, MB Docket No. 05-192

Dear Ms. Dortch:

On October 2, 2012, Stacy Fuller of DIRECTV, LLC and undersigned counsel met with Alex Hoehn-Saric, Policy Director for Commissioner Rosenworcel, to discuss the above referenced proceedings. We first reiterated the necessity for extension of the cable exclusivity prohibition in its entirety, or at a minimum with respect to national and regional sports programming, as reliance upon a case-by-case complaint procedure and merger conditions would be a poor substitute for a clear rule of general applicability.

We then proceeded to discuss the proposals in DIRECTV's September 21, 2012 ex parte designed to minimize consumer disruption, improve the remaining program access rules, and streamline the process for seeking redress should the Commission nonetheless decide to allow the current rule to sunset.¹ Each of these proposals was either discussed in the Notice or is a logical outgrowth of the discussion contained therein. The Notice itself is a very broadly written document, seeking comment on an array of options under which the Commission would "retain, sunset, or relax" the cable exclusivity prohibition.² Among the many alternatives discussed at length in the Notice are: (1) the possibility of retaining the cable exclusivity prohibition with respect to regional sports networks ("RSNs") and other "must have" programming;³ (2) the alternative approach of a case-by-case regime with a rebuttable presumption related to such programming;⁴ (3) establishing a rebuttable presumption that would give a complainant the benefit of a prior determination that an exclusive contract involving the same network violated Section 628(b) (or, potentially, Section 628(c)(2)(B));⁵ and (4) modification of the current standstill procedures in Section 76.1003(l) to minimize any potential disruption to consumers.⁶ Given the breadth of the Notice and the program access regime to which it relates, as well as the filings made in this proceeding, adoption of the proposals made by DIRECTV is the kind of Commission action that interested parties should have anticipated.

In this regard, this case is not unlike another case in which the D.C. Circuit upheld a Commission rule as a logical outgrowth. Covad Communications Co. v. FCC involved a proceeding on remand in which the Commission sought comment on how to respond to questions raised by the court about “uneconomic entry.”⁷ The Commission ultimately adopted a “reasonably efficient competitor” standard even though no such concept had been discussed in NPRM. The court upheld this action as a logical outgrowth of the proceeding, finding that the petitioner should have anticipated adoption of such a standard given the context of the proceeding and the comments filed therein.⁸ “Given that the NPRM put interested parties on notice that the FCC wanted to answer our questions, and given that the Order answered our questions, the latter was easily a ‘logical outgrowth’ of the former.”⁹ Here too, the Notice arose as a response to the impending sunset of the cable exclusivity prohibition, and put interested parties on notice that the Commission was considering a wide range of options under which it would “retain, sunset, or relax” that rule. The proposals made by DIRECTV respond directly to that discussion and are clearly a logical outgrowth of it.

In addition, we noted that national networks with significant sports programming, such as ESPN, TNT, and NBC Sports Network,¹⁰ have content that is just as non-replicable and highly valued as sports programming carried by an RSN. Indeed, national sports networks typically preempt games that would otherwise appear on an RSN, as evidenced by the attached schedule of nearly 100 National Hockey League games carried on Versus (now NBC Sports Network) last year and over 50 National Basketball Association games to be carried on TNT this year.¹¹ The Commission has more than sufficient evidence from the impact of withholding such programming on a regional basis to exercise its predictive judgment to conclude that withholding on a national scale would have a similar effect.

¹⁰ DIRECTV recognizes that ESPN and TNT are not currently affiliated with any cable operator, and thus are not subject to the program access rules. We refer to them solely as examples of the type of national networks with significant sports content that would have a significant effect on competition if withheld and thus should be subject to the proposed presumption if they are cable-affiliated.

Respectfully submitted,
