

The ONLY (almost always) reliable telephone infrastructure is copper wire land lines. Don't let ATT and other telcos stop providing this service. It is dangerous for the country. With Hurricane Sandy here in NY recently, electricity, tv, internet & digital phones all went down. But the copper wire land lines stayed functioning, as always happens here with disasters, including the 911 attacks. The FCC should insist that this technology remains available.