

One of the biggest reasons Verizon Communications & Verizon Wireless don't want Net Neutrality is so they can erect a toll free data scheme where content providers pay for users data all the while maintaining data caps. Also so they can privilege their own services (if not applying cap equally) and discriminate against competitors. Verizon Wireless would love to discourage users from running free or third party alternative mobile apps for viewing and accessing maps. Third party GPS that competes with Verizon Navigator (app is free but service by Verizon costs money) and is completely free they want to discriminate against. I urge the FCC to reclassify broadband as the Title II telecommunications service it is and act to protect the Open Internet from such ISP discrimination.
