

Whenever I hear about an opportunity to even up the playing field when it comes to technology in rural America vs. the advances that larger metropolitan areas have, I'm eager to participate in the public policy arena. My children recently told me about LightSquared and its wholesale business model, and I understand your agency is considering an application the company has submitted before you. Will you please support the company and approve its paperwork? I'm confident that their plan to provide a wholesale wireless network will be of tremendous benefit to underserved communities throughout the U.S.
