

regarding Section 73.1216, I would like to make my comment public that I believe that broadcast radio stations should be allowed to post rules and regulations for individual contests on the stations' website. Broadcast radio has become so intertwined with the internet that it seems to be good business to make them available so listeners can actually read and comprehend them. Usually, rules broadcast on air are so compressed for time that they are virtually unintelligible. I do think that there should be a continuing requirement to air them if the website is not available, or perhaps during overnight hours.
