"TD-LTE SC-FDMA Uplink = 2X Range Extension

indano by indano . Dec 27, 2012 9:23 AM . Permalink

Single Carrier Frequency Division Multiple Access lowers the Peak-to-Average Ratio of the transmitted signal thus allowing the Average Power of Uplink transmissions to be increased without degrading battery life and thus extending the handset range to twice the WiMax range. YES TWICE! Switching to TD-LTE will double the coverage range of a Clearwire cell site and improve signal penetration be 2X.

We are being sandbagged by Clearwire and Sprint!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Time to flip the switch on those linecard upgrades and show the public and retail shareholders what the network can really do! The uplink habdshake is the limiting factor on range and penetration. SC-FDMA addresses that!

DISH and SB know it.

We're sitting on a Gold Mine.

Stop the sandbagging Clearwire - lightup the TD-LTE Network!!!!

SC-FDMA (single carrier) allows MIMO and Beamforming. Two technologies that also support higher data rates and range extension.

Stop the sandbagging Clearwire - lightup the TD-LTE Network!!!!

VOTE NO on a $2.97 buyout out. $8+ is what CLWR is worth.

This is a very important post.

A simple line-card change and many CLWR sites are TD-LTE up-and-running.

TD-LTE has ALREADY BEEN SHOWN to INCREASE COVERAGE/PENETRATION by 2X.

Don't let Sprint steal CLWR from us!

$8+ ($2.97 + 1 S share) minimum!!!

The only one that can save the day are the hedge funds if they truly understand what's at stake here and are willing to risk more resources on their position. The average John Doe sold or will sell at the first spike or dip from these levels. They could care less cause they flip stocks like burgers. Why haven't the other carriers stepped in with counter offers is beyond me unless they are waiting to the very end to make a move. In other words, can they make an offer if the vote turns out yes? I can't believe that the other carriers are so sure of their spectrum availability in the near future and allow SB/S controll most of the airwaves with the fastest speeds. They must be over dosing on Tylenol or something. All we can do is wait for the outcome in the meantime i am showing a positive return, will wait and will be voting my shares no.
