

IB Docket No. 12-376

I object to the allowance of WiFi internet on commercial airlines. I do not think the public who do not wish to subject themselves to the extra radiation that all passengers using their phones or internet service is just. We occur radiation just from flying and if this is allowed to pass then the amounts of radiation all of us would be receiving would definitely be hazardous to our health. Why should the people's rights who do all they can do to protect themselves from radiation be violated simply because it's an inconvenience to be without access to the internet for a few hours? Confined within a metal structure only magnifies the radiation being emitted by smart phones, regular phones ,lpads,tablets and laptops. This ruling would definitely be discriminatory towards the people who are sensitive to radiation and to those of us who know that radiation levels would far exceed radiation exposure limits. If allowed to pass this would definitely be a great way to eliminate most of the population as cancer rates would escalate. So if this is the agenda and it seems to be I object as my rights as a passenger are being violated to unnecessary bodily harm.

Whenever I try to fix an error in this message strange grammatical errors occur in this report.