

<http://www.fcc.gov/disability>

Contents

Disability-related laws and regulations implemented by the FCC

Non-regulatory activities of the Chairman's Accessibility and Innovation

Initiative

Disability-related offices and opportunities at the FCC

How to subscribe to the AccessInfo announcement list

How to file a public comment in an FCC rulemaking proceeding

How to file a complaint with the FCC

Advisory Committees to the FCC

Related programs of other federal agencies

Related projects of external partners

References

Disability-related laws and regulations implemented by the FCC

The FCC addresses a variety of disability-related telecommunications matters, including telecommunications relay service, access to telecommunications equipment and services for people with disabilities, access to emergency information and closed captioning. The FCC also provides expert advice and assistance to consumers, industry and others on issues relevant to people with disabilities. The FCC initiates rulemakings for the development of disability policy, conforming with existing disability laws and policies and supporting the goal of increasing accessibility of communications services and technologies.