

I would like to ask that the FCC "NOT" allow limited nudity or any additional crude or vulgar language on TV shows during prime time viewing hours. I know that your organization is bombarded by those who would like to see all limitations on what they air to be lifted. I have read comments and watched interviews where script writers and producers have pushed for less censorship and more freedom to provide a product that is more "real" than what we now have on TV. My biggest concern is that what they really want is the opportunity to write and produce programs with vulgarity, violence, nudity and sexual content to compete with cable. When I think the biggest challenge for them would be to create programs that have great content with story lines and redeeming characters who project the values that adults and children (especially) can emulate.
