

I am already disturbed at the loose morals that are displayed on television during daytime and prime time television, making it nearly impossible to find wholesome programming that my family can watch. Please do not relax the standards even further by allowing expletives and nudity, however brief, subsequently lowering the moral standards of our society further. I understand that it is the responsibility of the parents to ensure that children are exposed to what the parents deem necessary. However, we all know that television is an electronic babysitter in many homes and further degradation of standards on the airwaves will lead to more long term damage to those children that do not have limits.
