

I just heard that you are considering relaxing the rules for television shows, to allow even nudity. I do ask that you reconsider this in light of how this would have a degrading affect on our culture. I was told that the "law" is the lowest measure of what is acceptable in a country's society. As a follower of Christ, and as a private citizen believing that we need to work to improve our society, I think relaxing current restrictions would result in an immediate deterioration of current programming. I fear that we already have a serious problem with pornography, human trafficking, and sex related addictions. Our children already have unprecended exposure to tragic situations. Don't we owe it to them to allow them some measure of innocense in their childhood? If we would tighten our restrictions, I believe we would find our society would learn to become more respectable in our behaviors toward one another. Television has a major impact on Americans, so I believe the FCC needs to exercise reasonable restraint for the sake of our culture. Please be responsible with the power you hold in influencing our society.

Thank you for giving these things you consideration.
