

I oppose the considered relaxation of FCC indecency standards which would allow television and radio to broadcast nudity and/or expletives. In fact I would like to see the FCC tighten standards for over-the-air broadcasts to reign in the graphic language and images already allowed. With the growth in cable television, internet broadcast and satellite services, the one refuge people who care about decency should have is the over-the-air broadcast. As a family we have made the decision to cut the satellite television just for this reason. If the standards are relaxed further then we have no options left but to remove the antennae. I urge you to please consider tightening the decency standards, not relaxing them.
