

I'm disappointed the FCC is even considering the idea of dropping a ban of obscenities on radio and TV. Surely you have noticed the overall coarsening of our culture since Rhett Butler issued the first "damn" in Gone With the Wind. We are very careful about air and water pollution--why not mind pollution? People have the right to excrete obscenities in their speech--why give them the public forum of our TV and radio spectrum? I do not want such effluvia polluting the public air waves.

Regarding "non-sexual" nudity on the public airwaves--as a male, I must tell you there is no "non-sexual" female nudity. There is plenty of nudity available on the internet and cable TV. Why tempt men further into rash sexual behavior or crimes?

As a voter and tax payer I order you NOT to change the current policy!

Sincerely,

Jeff Smith
