

I am a mother of three and Business Manager to my husband's video & film company, The 5 Stones Group, Inc. I am hoping that you will continue the ban on the word, 'Fuck' as well as nudity and other vulgar language and innuendos on television. The majority of American viewers are either Muslim, Jewish, Christian, Catholic, or Hindu - all of which teach their children modesty of speech and appearance from an early age. Although we try to DVR shows that we will watch as a family so we can fast forward through the commercials - there will be an inevitable program such as a high profile sporting event, the Olympics, or an Awards Presentation that we will view live. It is absolutely absurd that we should worry about watching something that could include nudity, vulgar language, or sensitive topics during primetime viewing. Most young children are in bed after 8 or 9 pm. Why MUST we try to fit such things in prior to that time?

I truly am not an unreasonable parent or business professional. I am responsible for what goes into my children - and into my home. Therefore, I urge you to please keep tight boundaries on what is aired from 6 am - 9 pm. These are primetime hours for kiddos and families.

Sincerely,

Tiffany A. E. Edwards
