

I am appalled to think the FCC is set to drop the ban on f-word, nudity on television and radio stations nationwide. If people want to live an immoral life, act vulgar, and pursue that type of life style we have no control over that, but to expose the rest of us, our children and grandchildren to that garbage is more than a sin, it is a treat to true liberty to every American. Freedom of speech allows for public: dissent, political argument, religious liberty and discussion, theological discussion; the ability to agree or disagree, but never has and never should be allowed to publically express vulgar, distasteful, nudity or sexually explicit expressions. I for one do not want to flip through channels and be exposed to such trash. If I see or hear public dissent, political argument, religious liberty and discussion, theological discussion etc., that I am not in agreement with I can turn the channel no harm done; it is too late to turn the channel on the other, the harm has already been done due to the very nature of that disgusting content.
